An OPTHALMOLOGIST is either a medical doctor (M.D.) or an osteopathic physician (D.O.) who is qualified and especially trained to diagnose and treat all eye and visual system problems, both medically and surgically, as well as diagnose general diseases of the body.

An Ophthalmologist receives a minimum of twelve years of post-high school education, which typically includes four years of college, four years of medical school, one or more years of general clinical training, and a minimum of three years of residency (hospital-based training) in ophthalmology. During that residency, ophthalmologists receive intensive training in all aspects of eye care, including prevention, diagnosis, management and medical and surgical treatment of ocular diseases and disorders.

Frank A. Bucci, Jr., MD, a local Ophthalmologist, who is internationally recognized by his peers as one of the Top 50 Ophthalmologists in the United States. He has also received an Achievement Award from the American Academy of Ophthalmology for his outstanding contributions in the field of ophthalmology. His surgical experience, ongoing clinical research, cutting-edge technology, and outstanding staff have distinguished Bucci Laser Vision as the most trusted eye care institute serving Northeast Pennsylvania since 1998.

Bucci Laser Vision has offices in Wilkes-Barre, Pittston, Scranton, Old Forge, Hazleton, Stroudsburg, Brodheadsville and Mt. Pocono. Free consultations are available to any patient seeking spectacle independence through refractive surgery. For more information, visit www.buccivision.com.
